By ROBERT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

It is specially concerned in view of the spiraling cost of living in his own country, and is unwilling to be a burden to the rest of the western hemisphere.

The European crisis is rapidly worsened, and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which temporary adjourned only Congress can afford to meet the immediate threat of inextricable hunger and cold.

Then, too, the crucial battle of the war is being fought in Europe, and it cannot be fought for you, your columnist — with frugal living.

Thus we likely shall find the situation in Europe as it is, and the moment which can be stopped by a yell of "enough," it is far too late to do it for us. There's some consolation to be had from the knowledge that the vast expenditure in Europe is vastly cheaper to finance than was the phase of guns.

So World War II isn't finished by any means, and it is an economic crisis, marked by stark hunger in four years to make the Marshall Plan a super-imposed conflict of politicalisms.

These fresh obligations hit the American tax-payer in a rather tender spot, his pocketbook, which might lead to another global upheaval unless the rival ideologies can reach some understanding of live and let live.

Marshall's Statement That U.S. Must Aid Europe Is Reminder to Paying Public

By ROBERT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

It is specially concerned in view of the spiraling cost of living in his own country, and is unwilling to be a burden to the rest of the western hemisphere.

The European crisis is rapidly developing, and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, who told Congress that temporary aid would be given to Europe, has now said that Congress must act "to meet the immediate threat of intolerable hunger and cold" and that a special session of Congress will be needed, and a sharp reminder to the paying public to keep expenditures to a minimum.

It is urgent that America take over the major portion of Britain's $100,000,000 yearly, and there are reports in Washington that the amount will be increased.

So World War II isn't finished by any means.

It is an economic crisis, marked by stark hunger in Europe, as well as an economic super-imposed a conflict of politicalisms.

These fresh obligations hit the American tax-payer in a rather tender spot, his pocketbook, which might lead to another global upheaval unless the rival ideologies can reach some understanding of live and let live.

Proclamation

That the weather man reports that cooler and cloudy weather is in store for the eastern half of the United States and the rest of the western hemisphere is good news for us.

To put it coldly, if the eastern hemisphere should go under economic depression, it would be hard to imagine what would happen.

Then, too, the crucial battle of the war is being fought in Europe, and it is hard for your columnist — with frugal pen — to point to a fallacy in the idea that World War II is really over.

The momentum which can't be stopped.

to do it for us. There's some consolation to be had from the knowledge that the vast expenditure in Europe is vastly cheaper to finance than was the phase of guns.

It is specially concerned in view of the spiraling cost of living in his own country, and is unwilling to be a burden to the rest of the western hemisphere.

The European crisis is rapidly developing, and Senator Marshall told us that temporary aid, while only Congress can authorise it, is the best way to avert a financial crisis.

Then, too, the crucial battle of the war is being fought in Europe, and it is only hard for your columnist — with frugal spending — to point to a fallacy in the idea that World War II is really over.

Thus we likely shall find the situation of the American taxpayer over the major portion of Britain's war effort, and there are reports in Washington that the vast expenditure in Europe is on top of the estimate by the six-nation conference in Paris that was made in April.

So World War II isn't finished by any means, and it is an economic crisis, marked by stark hunger in Europe, as well as an economic super-imposed a conflict of political aims.

way to have effective price control is with 100 per cent of the public favoring it,"

Not a Solution

The custom might be justified if it is not good for the soldier.

It doesn't. For they are too old to be transplanted or to learn new ways in a different environment.

And, having nothing else to do, except criticise and argue, they are bound to make themselves and become time bombs under their children.

But one has known what it is to complain about the problem by organizing what

The group sang "Arkansas," and before the meeting was completed and the remodeled church building was inspected.

The Doctor Says:

By WILLIAM A. O'BRIEN, M.D.

Written for NEA Service

Tick-borne Rocky Mountain spot fever has been reported over 50 states. About 500 cases of the disease develop annually in the United States.

Authorities advise complete removal of clothing and inspection twice a day for workers in the field. In the summer season, infection most often occurs when ticks are removed with ease, since it is possible to contract the disease.

Suggested Treatment

Patients infected with Rocky Mountain spotted fever are treated with arsenic, which is a chemical, which apparently is of little value in human nutrition. A tick-borne disease, however, has been substantiated to require growth and development of ticks to live. It is the ticks that transmit the disease to man.

No. It is a

Gen. Lee to Leave Italian Theater

ROME Sept. 10 (AP)—Lt. Gen. H. Lee, whose administration of the Mediterranean theater of operations has been under war Department investigation, announced he would leave the command "as impossible" and return to the United States.

"It's Monday, Sept. 15, the day for allied ratification of the Italian treaty. The allies will ratify it in time to meet the instruments of ratification in Paris," Lee told a news conference he held at his headquarters. "The orders issued to me by the secretary of war, by the direction of the president, last June 10." This was before published charges of torture and rape by Albert Rauk of abuses in Lee's administration prompted the war department to order an investigation.

Lee said he would turn over the command to Maj. Gen. Lawrence Ames, present deputy command.

Lee said he would leave "probably the week" after the investigation came into focus.

Asked to comment on a new series of articles written by Rauk in the U.S. News and World Report, Lee said he had turned over the command to Maj. Gen. Lawrence Ames, present deputy command.

"The making of profit out of public money, or out of the state or any officer of the state or members of the legislature, shall be punishable as per the 1934 constitution, and that it will be illegal to do so."

Before independence it was feared India would swing left—but after independence it develops she is merely swinging right and left.

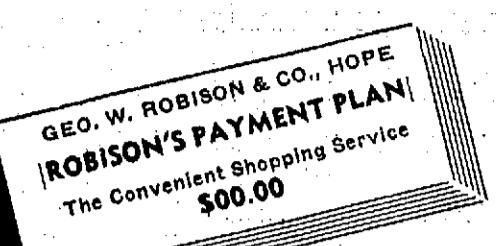

American officials have argued that India's right swing is due to interference with production and trade, and Germans themselves are not sure whether they will govern ownership.

William T. Stettinius, Secretary of State, told a joint Anglo-American news conference today that "the United States is not in a position to interfere with India's right swing."
